Cultural Heritage and Urban Renewal: Preserving Identity in Global Cities

In today's rapidly changing world, global cities are emerging as powerful hubs of culture, innovation, and economic growth. These cities serve as melting pots, attracting people from various backgrounds, and contributing to the rich diversity that defines our global community. However, with this rapid urbanization, there is a growing concern about the loss of cultural heritage and identity in these urban centers. It is essential to find a delicate balance between urban renewal and the preservation of cultural heritage to sustain the unique identities that make these cities so vibrant.
